OBITUARIES

CHARLES WINSTON CLAXON,

71, a retired personnel officer with the Central Intelligence Agency, died of cancer July 14 at his home in Bethesda.

Born in Switzer, Ky., Mr. Claxon graduated from the old Columbus School of Law, now Catholic University Law School. He served in the Army Quartermaster Corps during World War II. After the war, he was a personnel officer with the Army Corps of Engineers here.

He joined the CIA in 1951 and worked for the agency until he retired in 1973.

In retirement Mr. Claxon did volunteer work for a self-help program for the hearing-impaired. He was a former president of the Central Intelligence Agency Retirees Association and a member of the Bethesda Masonic Lodge.

Survivors include his wife, Helen Lydia Claxon, and one daughter, Sue C. Fisher, both of Bethesda, and two grandchildren.

ANNE RUTLEDGE WARNER,

59, a retired employe of the Central Intelligence Agency who was a member of St. Martin's Catholic Church in Gaithersburg, died July 12 at her home in Gaithersburg after a heart attack.

Mrs. Warner was a native of Washington and a graduate of St. Patrick's Academy. She held accounting posts with the American Security & Trust Co. from 1945 to 1955, and did similar work with the CIA until retiring in 1970.

Survivors include her husband, Ronald J. Warner of Gaithersburg; two sons, Ronald Jr., of Vidalia, Ga., and Stephen R., of Washington, and two daughters, Suzanne N. Franklin and Jennifer C. Warner, both of Norfolk.
